

RentaPay

A guide for landlords, property managers & caretakers, and tenants

Generated 13 August 2026

Understand RentaPay

The problem

Collecting rent across even a handful of units usually means chasing bank slips, cross-checking M-Pesa messages against a spreadsheet, and hoping nothing falls through the cracks when a caretaker forgets to note a cash payment. Multiply that across several properties, a property manager, and a caretaker on the ground, and reconciliation becomes a part-time job on its own.

What RentaPay does

RentaPay is a single system that landlords, property managers, caretakers, and tenants all use to keep rent collection, records, and reporting in one place:

- Landlords see every property, every unit, and every payment — paid, pending, or late — without waiting on anyone to compile a report.
- Property managers and caretakers record payments as they happen (including manual/cash payments) so the landlord's view stays current.
- Tenants get a clear way to pay, submit their payment code, and get a receipt once it's approved — useful proof if a payment is ever in question.

Who it's for

Whether you manage one unit or a hundred, across one building or several, RentaPay scales with you — you can add properties, units, and staff as your portfolio grows, without changing how the system works.

Trust, in short

RentaPay never mixes up whose money is whose: every payment is tied to a specific tenant, unit, and property, and only the people you've explicitly given access to — a manager or caretaker you've invited — can see or act on your properties. See the Privacy Policy for how your data is handled.

How pricing works

RentaPay works on a subscription, not a per-transaction commission. When a landlord signs up, they subscribe per unit, per month — the price is set by RentaPay and may change over time depending on market conditions.

How subscribing works

- At sign-up, a landlord chooses how many units to subscribe and for how long (for example, 22 units for two months).
- The subscription covers those units for that period — collecting rent through RentaPay during that window doesn't cost anything extra per payment.
- When a subscription expires, the landlord gets a message prompting them to renew. For example, if a 22-unit, two-month subscription runs out, that landlord is notified to subscribe again to keep using RentaPay for those units.

Current subscription rates are confirmed during sign-up, since they can move with the market. Reach out via the contact details on this page if you'd like current pricing before you sign up.

What's included

- Unlimited tenant accounts for your subscribed units
- Manager and caretaker accounts with permission controls
- Payment records, receipts, and reporting
- Support via call, WhatsApp, and email

How payments flow

Today: tenant pays, landlord confirms

Right now, RentaPay does not confirm payments automatically. Here's how a payment actually goes through:

1. The tenant pays rent to the till/account shown in their portal (for example, an M-Pesa till number) and receives a payment confirmation code from that transaction.
2. The tenant submits that code in RentaPay against their rent balance.
3. The landlord (or their manager/caretaker) reviews and approves the submitted code.
4. Once approved, the payment is recorded and everything updates automatically — the tenant's balance, the landlord's dashboard, and the receipt.

This approval step exists deliberately, for trust: it gives the landlord a chance to verify a payment actually came through before it's marked as paid in the system.

Manual payments

Some tenants pay by cash or bank deposit instead. A property manager or caretaker can record that payment directly on the tenant's behalf, and it goes through the same review step before it's confirmed.

Where this is headed

RentaPay is working toward direct payment integrations that would confirm some payments automatically, without the code-submission-and-approval step. When that's available, landlords will be able to choose whether to use automatic confirmation or keep the current approve-each-payment process — it won't be forced on anyone.

Receipts

Once a payment is approved, it generates a receipt the tenant can view or download, and the landlord can always see who submitted and who approved each payment.

The Landlord portal

Real product screenshot — landlord and tenant names, and amounts shown, are illustrative.

From the landlord dashboard you can see, at a glance:

- Tenants overdue and the total owed, front and center, with a one-tap way to view them.
- What's been paid this month, how many units are vacant, and how many days are left on your subscription.
- Quick actions — add a unit, send a bulk rent or WhatsApp reminder, download a report, or change rent/due dates across units at once.

illustrative. Real product screenshot — tenant names and amounts shown are

Below the summary, every unit shows its tenant, what they owe, and their status — filterable to All, Overdue, Upcoming, Paid, or Vacant, so you can go straight to the tenants who need attention.

Real product screenshot — tenant names and amounts shown are illustrative.

Paid tenants are shown just as clearly as overdue ones, along with a count of vacant units and any unused slots on your subscription, ready to assign to a new tenant.

10:28

4G

Photos

Photos

Add photos (up to 2 more)

Choose Files

No file chosen

Use these photos on other units too

Listing status

Occupied

☐

This unit requires a deposit from a future tenant

☒

List this unit on the public listings page when vacant

Rent & due date

Monthly rent

KES 4,750

Change

Due day of month

Day 1

Change

Payment method

Using the general default payment method

Set override

Extra charges

Real product screenshot.

Each unit has its own settings — photos, whether it's occupied or listed publicly when vacant, monthly rent and due date, deposit requirements, and payment method — so unit-level details stay accurate as tenants move in and out.

RentaPay*Dashboard

OVERVIEW ▶

FINANCES ▶

TENANTS ▶

OPERATIONS ▶

ACCOUNT ▼

Settings

Manage subscription

First-Time Login Details

FAQs

Help / Complaints

Virtual Assistant

Gracious Homes ▾

$ 40,900 owed

t units

nder

k rent change

Help

Maintenance

Messages

Real product screenshots.

The full menu gives you everything in one place: overview, finances (statistics, payment history, disputed charges, payment plan requests, pending confirmations), tenants, day-to-day operations, and account settings including subscription management.

You can add properties and units as your portfolio grows, and invite a property manager or caretaker to a specific property without giving them access to your other properties.

Property managers and caretakers

Managers and caretakers you invite log into the same landlord portal shown above — there's no separate app or layout for them. What changes is what they're allowed to see and do, scoped to the property (or properties) you've given them access to.

Property managers can do almost everything a landlord can on their assigned properties — record and review payments, manage tenants, and handle day-to-day operations.

Caretakers have a lighter-weight version of the same portal, meant for someone on the ground rather than someone handling the books. A caretaker can view their assigned properties and tenants, send reminders, and revoke a vacating notice — but cannot:

- Record, confirm, or reject a rent payment
- View payment history, financial statistics, or disputed charges
- Access payment plan requests
- Add, remove, or edit units, or change rent amounts
- Add extra charges, upload documents, or log expenses
- Remove a tenant, edit a tenant's balance, settle a deposit, or transfer a tenant between units
- View the list of other property managers
- Edit payment method details

If a caretaker tries to do any of these, they're shown a message pointing them to the landlord or property manager instead.

The Tenant portal

Real product screenshot — tenant name and balance shown are illustrative.

Tenants use RentaPay to:

- See exactly what's due, including whether it's upcoming or overdue, and the till/account number to pay to.
- Pay and submit their payment code — after paying to the number shown, the tenant enters the confirmation code in the app, which the landlord or their manager/caretaker then reviews and approves.
- View their full payment breakdown and history, and access a receipt once a payment is approved.
- Reach support — call, WhatsApp, or email — directly from the portal if something isn't right. These contact details are kept current by the landlord's team, so tenants always have a working way to get help.

Real product screenshot.

Tenants also have access to their reputation history, documents, FAQs, and a way to raise a complaint or reach a virtual assistant directly from their own menu.

Getting started

1. Sign up as a landlord with your basic contact details.
2. Add your properties and units — as many as you have, whenever you have them. There's no limit and no extra step for adding more later.
3. Invite your managers and caretakers, scoped to the specific properties they should have access to.
4. Add your tenants, either yourself or by having your manager/ caretaker do it — each tenant gets their own portal access.
5. Start collecting — tenants can pay digitally, or your team can record manual payments, from day one.

Most landlords are set up and seeing their first payments within the same day. There's no paperwork beyond your own account details and the properties you want to add.

Frequently asked questions

What if a tenant doesn't pay? The unit shows as overdue in your dashboard as soon as the due date passes, so you know immediately rather than at month-end reconciliation. RentaPay records and reports; how you follow up is up to you and your lease terms.

Can I manage multiple properties from one account? Yes — there's no limit on properties or units, and you can invite different managers or caretakers to different properties.

Is my data secure? Only people you've explicitly invited can access your properties, and access is scoped to what you've given them. See the Privacy Policy for details on how data is stored and handled.

How do payments get confirmed? A tenant pays and submits their payment code in the app; the landlord (or their manager/caretaker) reviews and approves it, and everything updates automatically from there. See "How payments flow" above for the full picture, including where automatic confirmation is headed.

How do I get paid out, and how often? Payouts follow the schedule set in your account. You can see collected, pending, and paid-out totals at any time from your dashboard.

What happens if I want to stop using RentaPay? See the Terms & Conditions and Refund Policy for details on account closure and any applicable terms.

Where can tenants get help? Every portal — including the logged-out screen — shows the support call number(s), WhatsApp number(s), and email address you've configured, so tenants always have a direct way to reach support.